ABSTRACT

This presentation aims to highlight the progress that PepsiCo International has made towards their Environmental Sustainability commitment. It discusses the need for Companies to make a difference. The approach is not single-minded and is not purely focused on technology to make the difference, but rather aims to merge community responsibility and corporate needs by changing employee mindsets, behaviours and awareness. Supporting the various communities in which this company operates ensures that contributions are sustainable and will continue to deliver growth and knowledge.

PepsiCo International has leveraged technology and the human element and has made impressive gains in the Environmental Sustainability agenda. This global rollout has proved to be successful in every country in which the company operates and has also benefited that country's communities. From harvesting solar energy, wind power and rainwater, to biogas generators and high efficiency equipment, it has continued to support its vision of leaving the environment in a good or better condition than it was previously.
